

“I was worried my son’s life would be like mine - filled with drug and alcohol abuse, surrounded by addicts.”

Cheryl was driven by fear. She feared she would lose her son if she had to serve time in prison. She feared her son’s life would turn out like hers... a life of drug and alcohol abuse in a home surrounded by addicts.

“When I almost lost my son, it was a wakeup call for me,” Cheryl said. “I was on the verge of getting caught and going to jail, and there was no one who could look after him, since his father was also an addict.”

Cheryl was led to a local United Way partner agency program for chemically addicted women and their children. During the first six weeks in the program, Cheryl had no communication with the outside world other than the people in recovery.

“The staff encouraged me to interact with my son, to develop a maternal bond with him,” she said. “With their help, I gradually learned what it was to be a good parent.”

Despite being a severely drug exposed child with several early learning disabilities, Cheryl’s son is now healthy and has mastered age-appropriate skills. He is even ahead of his age level in some areas.

Cheryl learned the importance of being able to provide for herself and her family. She earned her cosmetology certificate and is now employed. She and her son graduated from the United Way program and moved into their own home. Cheryl continues to receive encouragement and support through the program’s weekly meetings.
